

Get Ready to Meet "The Dumbunny Family---of Rabbitboro"

—and follow their funny antics—in

The Evening Star

Beginning Wednesday

Here's a brand-new comic that will wring a daily laugh out of the most stoical reader—and give the children clean and wholesome humor—that's witty instead of being coarse—bringing a hearty laugh instead of a blush.

"In Rabbitboro"—with the Dumbunny's and their cotemporaneous characters—is a creation of a highly talented and cultured artist—Albertine Randall—whose humanizing of animals in pictures for St. Nicholas has made her famous as one of the world's greatest book-plate artists.

There's real wit in each pictured story—and each character "In Rabbitboro" will soon make fast friends of every Star reader who enjoys a hearty laugh and appreciates a keen satirical point—whether you are four years old or four-score.

"In Rabbitboro" is an exclusive feature in The Evening Star—starting Wednesday evening.

STILL another of many reasons why you cannot afford to miss a single issue of The Star—Evening or Sunday.
